

Jacob had not forgotten; he really wished he could forget about this report. The topic of bridges sounded so boring. "What is so interesting about bridges?" he mumbled to himself. "Writing about basketball would have been so much better," thought Jacob.

Jacob finished his after school snack. Then, he got his library books on bridges from his backpack and decided to write about specific bridges found in his hometown of Louisville, Kentucky.

Bridging Connections

Ready to read more?
Purchase the book today!